WILSON WINS! 46 BALLOTS

Leading Progressive Nominated

Marshall, of Indiana, his Running Mate

Convention Adjourns in Greatest Harmony, and Feeling that A Great Democratic Victory is Certain.

Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey, received the Democratic nomination for President Tuesday. His triumph came as the climax of a dramatic hour—the culmination of days of anxiety and wrangling. The final vote which determined the contest was taken amidst scenes that for dramatic intensity have never been exceeded in any convention ever held in the United States in the memory of any man here. The end came at 3:20 p. m. today.

Wilson, having weakened in last night's figures, was looking upon as a sure winner this morning. Chaffies then made it certain he would be nominated. On the forty-sixth ballot Wilson was nominated and there was general rejoicing. The delegates all pledged their hearty support to the new President.

Graham Camp Wins.

The Graham Camp baseball team crossed hats with the Cannel City baseball team on the Camp's grounds last Sunday. The weather was ideal and the largest crowd that has ever witnessed a ball game at this place saw the fast team of the Camp win the game by the score of 11 to 2. The Camp was never in danger from the start. The Cannel City boys chanced to make two scores in the 8th and from then on until the last they tried mightily hard to roll up their score but no doubt fate was against them as it has been all the year. Tony who starred in the game would be difficult but the playing of Cox at third, Davis at the mound and Barker at centerfield was indeed sensational. Benton pitched a good game, still he was batted from center to circumference and only struck out 6 men, while Davis struck out 13.

The line up as follows:

Cannel City	Graham Camp
Barker	cf Williams
Benton J.	lf Henry D.
Atkins	rf May
Lykins	1b Steele
Elam T.	2b Henry W.
Elam G.	3b Cox
Gambill	c Cisco
Benton E.	p Davis

Spend Sundays

AT BEAUTIFUL Highland Park

Kool, Kosy, Komfortable. Games and amusements for old and young. Plenty to satisfy the inner man.

Farmer's Corner.

Keep everlasting after 'em—the weeds. Stir the ground after each rain but don't plow too deep. By this means the rain that falls today can be conserved for use during the latter part of July and August.

Mr. Farmer, contrast your position with that of the professional politician just now, and ask yourself the question: "Which would I rather my boy would be?" If you decide that you had rather he would be a farmer, begin to educate him along these lines at once. Make the farm attractive; make his work pleasant; make the home and his environment congenial; give him something he can call his own and let him own it. Do not give him a bull calf at weaning time, and let him feed and roar it until it is ready for the market and then sell it and put the money in your pocket. Many a boy has been driven off the farm by just such treatment as this. Give your boy something that he will take pride in and let him have it for his very own. In this way you will make a farmer out of him instead of a possible vagabond.

Have you examined your chicks for mites and lice? If you have it's a ten-to-one shot that you have not looked in vain. Biddy is not going to do her best if she is compelled to fight lice and mites day and night. They are not hard to get rid of if you will only go at it right. White-wash for the hen house and roosts; ashes, dust and a good insect powder will do the work. Lice congregate around the eyes and bill of young chickens. They are easily destroyed by the application of a little grease. Better try it. It will pay.

We have yet much to learn about that subtle force to which we now know little more than its name. Electricity is used for power and light and that is about all. We are beginning to hear of its effect on vegetation. One field which lay contiguous to a trolley line is said to have yielded a much greater tonnage of hay than the same character of land situated at a distance from a public road.

Prof. Silas Wentworth claims that on his experimental farm at Roseville, Cal., electricity has proved capable of doubling the production of lambs and greatly increasing the crop of wool. A flock of sheep was divided, one-half being placed in a field under the power wires of an electric company, while the other portion was removed from electric influence. The fleeces of the sheep in the electrically influenced field were 20 per cent heavier and the lambs more than twice as numerous. Will the time come when there will be a market for cheap electric current in the service of agriculture? We wait to be shown.—Farm Press.

The Mountain Press Association.

The Mountain editors, newspaper men and women had a most delightful meeting at Trent June 21st and 22nd. The meeting was attended and participated in, not only by the mountain publishers but a number of representatives of Bluegrass papers were present and took part in the proceedings. A number of interesting and instructive papers were read and talks made which we regret we can't give in full. The program, as originally announced, was not adhered to strictly, but variations were made to suit the occasion. Miss Goldie Perry, Winchester, presented an interesting paper on "Woman's Sphere in the Newspaper World." Steve Vaughn, of the Winchester Democrat, read a splendid paper on "Pulling together for profit." Congressman W. J. Fields, of Olive Hill, Col. R. R. Perry, former editor of the Sun-Sentinel, Winchester, Judge O. H. Pollard, of Jackson, J. B. Hoge, of the Hazard Herald and A. H. Patton, of Breathitt County News, each addressed the convention in a happy and instructive vein. A Constitution and By-Laws for the Association were adopted. Ryland C. Musick of the Jackson Times, was re-elected President of the Association. The other officers elected were: G. W. Bachman, of the Agitator, Frenchburg Vice-President; Steve Vaughn, of the Winchester Democrat, Secretary-Treasurer.

The date and place of the next meeting will be selected by the Executive Committee. On the whole the meeting was quite successful. The L. Park Hotel is a delightful place to hold such meetings and Mr. and Mrs. Howe certainly know how to feed their guests and make them feel at home.

He is well qualified to fill this office, is the logical candidate at this time, is a deserving Republican, and is a mountain man.

This office has been held by a Montgomery County man for the past forty-six years. It is time the mountain people were given some representation. Friends of Judge Kirk over the district are confident he will win, and he is becoming more popular each day.

The Primary election will be held on Saturday August 3rd. Let every Republican in the county go to the polls and help Judge Kirk, a mountain man, and the son of an old soldier, win the nomination.

ATTENTION MORGAN COUNTY

TEACHERS. THIS IS FOR YOU.

A Great many of the "up-to-date teachers of Morgan County are already readers of the COURIER. A great many more will be after the institute convenes. Why? Because no progressive teacher fails to subscribe for and read his or her County paper. We are going to call the COURIER of the 11th inst. THE INSTITUTE EDITION. Each teacher attending the institute will be presented with a copy which is a cordial invitation to subscribe. We can help you—we have been helping you. But we cannot be of much benefit to you unless you read the paper. Morgan county has the best average lot of teachers of any county in Eastern Kentucky. She has the best rural school houses and, last but not least, she has one of the best County Superintendents in all Kentucky. There is no reason why Morgan should not lead her sister counties educationally. She's doing it now. The COURIER is all the time working for the good of you and your schools. Let's be mutually helpful to each other. Subscribe for the COURIER. Look out for the "Institute Edition." It will contain something of interest to you.

In some respects the heathen Chinese surpass the people of Morgan county, loud as we boast of our achievements. The Chinese idea is to never repair a highway but to make their vehicles stronger as their roads get worse.

The Morgan county people do neither.

The greatest hero is not he who in glittering armor arrayed, with a whoop and a rushes on to battle and to yell death, but rather he who fights life battle uncomplainingly and alone and goes down to death at last without sympathy or applause.

Don't get restless—the delinquent list and the list of claims have been in the hands of the Lynotyper for several weeks and we are looking for the plates every day. The publication will appear as soon as plates arrive.

The tallest tree in the world is the Australian eucalyptus, reaching a total altitude of 490 feet. The biggest are the mammoth trees of California, some of which are 276 to 376 feet in height and 108 feet in circumference at the base. From measurements of the rings it is believed that some of these trees are from 2,000 to 2,500 years old. The oldest tree in the world is said to be on the island of Kos, off the coast of Asia Minor. It is several thousand years old, but just how many no one has dared to say. The tree is carefully preserved by a wall of masonry around it, and the trunk is thirty feet in circumference. — Ex.

H. B. BROWN, Sheriff

My Lady of Doubt.

"And Eric is the son of a loyalist," laughing, "and wears a Continental uniform. I am not privileged to go so far, restrained by the limitations of sex, yet I may be equally a rebel."

"Which would seem to mean that all your kindness toward me would have been similarly given to any patriot soldier."

"Why—why, yes, I—think so." "And I do not, Mistress Claire; I refuse to so believe." Her eyes flashed up at me, and I lost all restraint in their swift challenge. "I am going to speak—just a word, yet I must give it utterance before I ride out into the dark, away from you. I love you. It makes no difference to me where your sympathies may be in this struggle, you have won my heart. Look up, dear, and listen. I am going back to camp, back to the campaign. I know not what the night, what the morrow may bring. But I know for ever I love you, and that if I live I shall surely come back. Will you be glad? Will you promise me welcome?"

"I could feel her tremble, yet there was no shrinking in her face, no alarm. "Oh, why were you compelled to say that! I tried so hard not to let you. I—I cannot make the promise, it would not be right."

"Not right?" "No, you do not know me. I told you before I was a sham, a fraud, not what I appeared to be. I will not explain even to you, and you must not say it. Only I have to tell you that I am not what you have, and be compelled to return this answer."

"You care then—you do not disguise that?" She threw her head back proudly, making no attempt to withdraw her hands. "Yes, I care any woman would. It is not true that I have served you merely because you were a soldier of the Cause. I think I was true, perhaps, at first, but later I was different. Oh! why do I say this? Why do I delay your departure by consenting to remain here in conversation? Major Lawrence, cannot you realize that my only desire is to have you get away safely?"

"That that is not my only desire," I protested. "It must be weeks, months, before I can hope to see you again. I am a servant of the Cause, and must go where I am sent; we are upon the verge of a campaign involving exposure and battle. I may not even come forth alive. Must I go without a word, without a hope? Claire, Claire, sweetheart, you have no right to turn me away, because of some phantom of imagination."

"But it is not, it is terribly real." "I care not; I would still love you in spite of all; you may be a spy—a British spy—but the fact would mean nothing to me. I would trust you, Claire, your womanhood; I should know that whatever you did was in accordance with your conscience, and be content—if you but love me. And, thank God! I know you do."

"I—I—no! You cannot mean that!" "Ay, but I do. Have you supposed I could not read the message of those eyes? Oh, it may be dark, dear, but there is a stargaze, and when the lashes lift—they confess in thousand times more than your lips acknowledge. Yet I insist on the lips! Now tell me," and I held her to me, "tell me!"

"What—oh, major, please!" "There are but three words to speak; whisper them, dear, and I go."

"Three words?" "Such easy words; they are trembling on your lips now—I love you." "But if I do not, if they are false. Hush! There is some one on the veranda—Seldon must have returned."

"All the more reason why you should speak quickly," I whispered, without releasing her. "Will you go, then? At once?" "I pledge my word."

She drew a deep breath, her eyes shadowed, but I could hear the swift pulsing of her heart. "It—it will mean nothing—nothing." "Of course; only a memory to dream over."

Her lashes lifted, her head tilted back upon my shoulder. For a bare instant I gazed down into the depths. "Then—I will—I love you!"

With the words I kissed her, pressing my lips to hers; an instant, they clung, and I felt the pressure of her arm, the hot blood rushing through my veins. "Sweetheart," I whispered, "sweetheart."

"No, no!" and she thrust me from her. "You forget, I am not that. You must not think it over. See, that man is coming down the steps. He will discover Captain Grant, and it will be too late—Oh, go, major, please go!"

I turned without another word, fully realizing the danger, the necessity of action. Her head touched mine as I grasped the rail. "We part friends," she said softly. "Some day you may understand and forgive me."

"I understand now more than you think," I returned swiftly, "and I am coming back to learn all."

CHAPTER XXII.

I uncovered Captain Grant. The trick was infinitely dense to conceal us from the man, who remained standing at the foot of the steps. He was but a mere dark shadow, and I could not even distinguish that he was a soldier, yet the danger of his presence was sufficiently great, for should he advance to the right he would come upon Grant's unconscious form, and in that silence the slightest noise might arouse suspicion. Mistress Claire still clung to my hand, but only to whisper a sentence of instruction. "Go straight north, major, until you reach the hedge; follow the shadow of that beyond the orchard, and then take the road running westward. Don't mount until you reach there—goodbye."

"Goodbye, you will not forget me?" "I—I am afraid not, but—but you must go!"

I left her standing there, a faint gleam of white against the dark shrubbery, motionless. There is no incident of that night's ride which I recall distinctly. I merely pushed on steadily through the darkness, leaving my mount to choose his own course, confident we were headed toward the river. I was sufficiently acquainted with the valley of the Delaware, when daylight came, to decide upon the nearest ford. As to the British patrols, I must run the risk of dodging these, but felt safe from such an encounter for several hours. In truth I met no one, having no occasion to even draw rein, although we passed through two small villages, and by a number of farms. I could not even determine that these houses were occupied; they were dark and silent, even the galloping hoofs of my horse failing to awaken response.

It was already daylight when I drew up on the bluff summit to gaze down into the river valley. In the middle distance small villages faced each other across the stream, and toward these most of the roads converged—proof of the existence of a ford. I could not be mistaken as to the town—Burlington on the Jersey shore, and opposite Bristol. I should be safe enough in the latter, even if we had no outpost stationed there. I knew homes along those shaded streets, where food would be forthcoming, and where I could probably procure a fresh horse. It was the nearer town, nestled on the Jersey bank, that I studied with the greatest care, but so far as I could see, the single street was deserted. To the south, certainly two miles away, a squadron of horse were riding slowly, surrounded by a cloud of dust. Without doubt this was the British patrol that had left the village at daybreak.

It was not close morning, and the padded Ranger's coat heavy and tight-fitting. I took it off, flinging it across the saddle pommel. As I did so a folded paper came into view, and I drew it forth, curiously. My eye caught the signature at the bottom of a brief note, and I stared at it in surprise. Fagin! How came Fagin to be writing to Captain Grant? He pretended to be a Tory to be sure, yet both armies knew him as a rascally outlaw, plundering loyalists and patriots alike. There came to me a memory of Farrel's chance remark that Grant had some connection with this fellow's rascaldom. I had not seriously considered it then, but now—why, possibly it was true. I read the lines almost at a glance, scarcely comprehending at first, and then suddenly realized the base villainy revealed:

"Have the money and papers, but the girl got away. Will wait for you at Lone Tree tonight. Don't fail, for the whole country will be after me as soon as the news gets out about Elmhurst."

FAGIN.

So that was the reason for this raid—Grant's personal affair. He had returned to Elmhurst, leaving his men to judge on into Philadelphia under their Hessian officers so that he might communicate with Fagin. What a pity it was I had failed to kill the fellow, instead of leaving him unconscious.

The papers! Perhaps they were in the coat also. Surely Grant had no time to change or destroy them, as he must have ridden directly to Elmhurst. I searched the pockets of the garment hastily, finding a note or two, his orders to escort Delavan, and a small packet tied securely by a cord. I felt no hesitancy in opening this, and ascertaining its contents. The lines I read hastily seemed to blur before my eyes; I could barely comprehend their purport. Little by little I grasped the meaning of it all, and then my mind leaped to recognition of Grant's purpose. They were notes of instruction, brief orders, suggestions, memoranda, such as might be issued to a secret agent greatly trusted. These were addressed simply "Mortimer," many unsigned, others marked by initials, but I instantly recognized the handwriting of Washington, Hamilton and Lee. Without question this packet was the property of Eric Mortimer, but why had the boy preserved these private instructions, covering months of operations, I should judge, although secretly one was dated? And what caused them to be of value to Captain Grant?

The answer came in a flash of suspicion—the colonel. He could be threatened with them, blackmailed, disgraced before Sir Henry Clinton, driven from his command. They were addressed merely to "Mortimer," discovered at Elmhurst, and were sufficient to convict of treason. It was a splendid plot, well conceived, and Grant was fully capable of carrying it out to the end. I could realize what the possession of these papers meant to him—military advancement, a distribution of the Mortimer estate in which he would doubtless share, and a fresh hold on Claire whereby he could terrify the girl into accepting them.

I stood there in uncertainty, turning these papers over and over in my hands, striving to determine my duty. Should I return to Elmhurst? To do so would only bring me into renewed peril, and would apparently benefit no one. Without this packet Grant was helpless to injure Colonel Mortimer. As to Claire, Seldon would protect her for the present, and as soon as the father returned, he would doubtless compel her to accompany him back to Philadelphia. The best service I could render was to destroy these notes, and then seek out Eric Mortimer, in Lee's camp, and tell him the whole story. All that anyone could do now was to warn the Mortimers against Grant, to let them know his treachery, and this

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa. In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book, his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says Roy Chaney, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. Dickson, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Once upon a time I had a great deal of trouble with my ducks," says F. M. Wainwright, Pennsylvania. "If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. M. Wainwright, Pennsylvania.

T. F. McCrea, a missionary in China, writes, "I found your book a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long tussle with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find Farm Journal indispensable."

"The Farm Journal beats them all," writes T. H. Potter, Pennsylvania. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. Gladwin, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what Farm Journal tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes Mrs. Joe Lawrence, Saskatchewan. "I was successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the Farm Journal way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"Farm Journal was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. William Davis, New Jersey. "When the first crop came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When I receive it, I feel the gladness jump into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"Farm Journal is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. I. Sloat, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the Farm Journal, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. Wainwright, Pennsylvania.

Cats and Witchcraft. It may be said that cats have for centuries been associated with Satan and witchcraft. Whereas in countries where wolves abounded men and women with the aid of the devil could turn the wolves into wolves—it is well known that the inhabitants of Ossory, Ireland, became wolves once in seven years—the Irish women usually became cats. It is also true that when the black death ravaged Europe learned men attributed the displeasure of the Almighty to the introduction of boots with pointed toes, which were supposed to be peculiarly offensive to the Lord.

New York's Wealth. According to the tabulation figures in the tax books for 1912 real estate in New York is assessed at $7,525,474,063. Estimating the royalty which is exempt from taxation at $2,500,000,000, the value of all real estate in the five boroughs approximately $10,000,000,000 (ten billions). The assessed valuation of taxable property in New York has been raised in the last 14 years, or since consolidation, from $2,463,135,687.

Not a Square Deal. The sound of laughter and crying came from upstairs. "Silence!" roared the late parent. But still the din went on. Then the father strode angrily to the bedroom door. "Who are you young lumps making all this noise about?" he demanded. "Oh, please, nothing," replied one of the twins. "Only nurse has given Alexander two baths and hasn't given me one."
